Message from the Territorial Commander

The Salvation Army, as both a church and charity, works in cities, country towns and rural communities, with every demographic and age group, to meet human need without discrimination through the love of Jesus.

The Salvation Army, in Australia, is one of the largest providers of social services and programs for people experiencing hardship, injustice or social exclusion. As part of realising our vision and living our values, we are continuing to respond to modern slavery in Australia, and we recognise our responsibility for supporting victims of modern slavery who are disproportionately represented in the communities we serve.

We are committed to our ethical, social and legal responsibility to ensure modern slavery does not take place in our operations and supply chains, and we value and respect the human rights of all including our officers, employees, volunteers, contractors, suppliers, those working in our supply chains and community members.

I am delighted to share with you our progress over the past year in our third modern slavery statement. I am appreciative of the activities and initiatives that have been undertaken by our personnel in continuing to build effective systems to prevent modern slavery in our operations and supply chains. I acknowledge that this work is a journey and will continue with a program of awareness, process improvements and adaptability over the years to come.

God bless you,

Message from the Chief Secretary

Since our first modern slavery statement, The Salvation Army continues to advance in its commitment to responding to the complex issue of modern slavery, as we live our vision of seeing lives transformed through the love of Jesus.

The 2022 financial year has again been a challenging year, with the ongoing effects of the global pandemic, as well as multiple natural disasters across Australia, which has increased vulnerability and demand for those engaging with The Salvation Army.

As we tackle modern slavery risks in our service delivery, operations and supply chains, we are continuing to improve our detection and response processes, as well as general awareness amongst our personnel.

I am proud of The Salvation Army’s progress this year towards recognising and reducing modern slavery risks, and I sincerely acknowledge that this has been a broad effort across all of The Salvation Army, its personnel and suppliers. I also acknowledge that this statement presents an opportunity to share our initiatives that will be of focus for future reporting periods, noting that continuous improvement is key to addressing modern slavery via long-term, sustainable action.

God bless you,

Winsome Merrett (Colonel)

The reporting entities:

The Salvation Army is a worldwide, unincorporated association, led by the person appointed from time to time holding the office of the ‘General of The Salvation Army’. The General is a corporation sole and is the actual trustee of two separate trusts, known as ‘The Social Work Trust’ and ‘The General Work Trust’. In order to hold property and conduct operations of The Salvation Army around the world, there are a range of different legal structures in place. In Australia, the relevant legal vehicles are the State/Territory-based statutory corporations, each given the name ‘The Salvation Army ([State/Territory]) Property Trust’ (‘the Property Trusts’).

The Property Trusts were established and / or are authorised under each of the following Acts of Parliament:

- (a) The Salvation Army (New South Wales) Property Trust Act 1929 (NSW);
- (b) Salvation Army (Queensland) Property Trust Act 1930 (Qld);
- (c) Salvation Army (Tasmania) Property Trust Act 1930 (Tas);
- (d) The Salvation Army (Victoria) Property Trust Act 1930 (Vic);
- (e) The Salvation Army (South Australia) Property Trust Act 1931 (SA);
- (f) The Salvation Army (Western Australia) Property Trust Act 1931 (WA);
- (g) Salvation Army Property Trust Act 1934 (ACT); and
- (h) Salvation Army (Northern Territory) Property Trust Act 1976 (NT).

The Property Trusts are not actually trusts themselves; they are corporate trustees of the General Work / Social Work Trusts. Officers of the Property Trusts are constituted as a body corporate called ‘The Trustees’, consisting of individuals appointed from time to time by the General of The Salvation Army.

Essentially, the difference between the Social Work and General Work Trusts lies in the purposes for which the assets of each of those trusts can be applied. The Social Work is essentially social / benevolent work; The General Work is essentially religious work.

The Social Work Trust is a Public Benevolent Institution with deductible gift recipient status. The General Work Trust is a Charitable Institution.

Some employees and other non-employee personnel (e.g. Clergy) within The Salvation Army are employed / engaged under the General Work Trust (usually Corps [Church] based / religious workers). Others are employed / engaged under the Social Work Trust. Even further still, some personnel are apportioned partly under General and partly under Social (e.g. 50% of their time is classified as being related to General Work and 50% Social Work), based on the role and responsibilities of the individual.

Disaster and Emergency Recovery

The Salvation Army Emergency Services (SAES) have served Australian communities

for over 40 years. Whether it's a natural disaster or a missing person search, SAES volunteers are among the first to arrive on the ground, providing immediate, medium and long-term support to victims and emergency personnel on the front line. Services provided aim to meet people at their point of need and this help doesn't stop when the crisis has passed.

Governance Framework

The Salvation Army Australia has a robust governance framework, with oversight by the Board and direct monitoring of activities through its committees. The below diagram outlines The Salvation Army Australia's governance structure.

Australian Charities and Not- for- Profits Commission

The Salvation Army Australia is registered with the Australian Charities and Not-for-profits Commission (the Commission), the national regulator of charities, established to maintain, protect and enhance public trust and confidence in the Australian not-for-profit sector. The Salvation Army respects and adheres to the governance standards as set by the Commission, which include the requirement to comply with Australian laws.

PROCUREMENT POLICY

The Salvation Army Australia’s Procurement Policy outlines the principles and identifies the standards that apply to procurement and the purchase of goods and services. It outlines due diligence in the procurement process, which must be proportionate to the level of expenditure and associated risk. Further, the policy highlights the possibility that purchased goods and services may be the result of Modern Slavery and that this must be considered by all parts of The Salvation Army Australia that engage in procurement of goods and services.

The following procedures and standards have been implemented to strengthen the application of the Procurement Policy:

Supplier Code of Conduct

During the next reporting period, there will be a renewed focus on review and improvements to all policies, standards and procedures to specifically delineate social responsibility requirements, including those applicable to addressing modern slavery.

Underpinning the governance framework are several policies, and, in particular, the following provides the principles for the effective, efficient and consistent management of risks across The Salvation Army Australia, which cover and address a broad range of fundamental principles, which guide the delivery of The Salvation Army’s mission, with a focus on ethical and lawful behaviour.

Identification of Modern Slavery Risks in our supply chains and operations

As part of its Governance framework, The Salvation Army Australia's Enterprise Risk and Compliance function continues to actively consider and review risks throughout its operations and supply chain, and, in particular, assesses the overall links to and understanding of modern slavery, as well as other ethical, social and governance matters.

The Salvation Army Australia recognises that there are inherent risks of modern slavery within a number of its key supply chains and spend categories.

Specifically, the following key modern slavery risk focus areas have been identified:

- Outsourcing & sub-contracting, noting that at times there is limited visibility of contractual arrangements at all levels
- Forced labour, in association with deceptive contracting, identity management and service fees
- Financing and property activities, inadvertently via the development of properties, all in support of what we do
- Child labour, particularly in the preparation of raw materials as part of the broader supply chain Engagement of people overseas, for example, via our international development partnerships
- Worker vulnerability and labour exploitation, across all parts of the supply chain

During the reporting period, The Salvation Army Australia's Enterprise Risk and Compliance function, in collaboration with the Strategic Sourcing and Procurement function, established a dedicated supply chain risk register. This undertaking considered all Australian and international suppliers across all supply chain activity, noting the adoption of centralised procurement practices across The Salvation Army Australia, and acknowledging that at times localised procurement decisions are required to meet the immediate needs.

The following risks were identified:

- Poor Due Diligence undertaken in vetting and onboarding new suppliers
- Failure by suppliers to comply with laws and regulations that govern the products and services provided to The Salvation Army Australia
- Supplier values do not align to those of The Salvation Army Australia, and they do not support key community expectations
- Supplier processes and systems do not adequately support The Salvation Army's processes and governance requirements
- Supplier activities and behaviours directly impact The Salvation Army Australia's reputation and public trust
- The Salvation Army's personnel do not appropriately follow established sourcing and procurement processes
- Supplier agreements are implemented without appropriate governance considerations and protections to The Salvation Army Australia

What we are doing to manage Modern Slavery Risks in our supply chain

In order to address the risks identified in its supply chain, The Salvation Army Australia established the role of Responsible Sourcing Manager, within the Procurement and Strategic Sourcing team. This role will have the following key responsibilities:

- Support the meaningful reduction of slavery and other rights violations in The Salvation Army Australia’s operations and supply chains.
- Guide The Salvation Army Australia to maintain and, where appropriate, exceed minimum compliance standards to fulfill community, legal and moral obligations.
- Inform The Salvation Army Australia’s modern slavery risk profile.
- Strategically engage with The Salvation Army’s suppliers to cascade responsible sourcing expectations into the supply chain. The Salvation Army Australia’s centralised Strategic Sourcing and Procurement function was formed and continues to evolve and integrate within all sourcing and supply decisions and activities.
- Enhance The Salvation Army Australia’s capacity through modern slavery awareness and training initiatives.

Work in these key focus areas will progress in future reporting periods, and strengthen the following existing initiatives in reducing modern slavery risks:

- Supply chain mapping beyond tier 1 and risk management in high risk spend categories
- Contractor engagement and management procedures
- Relationship with The Salvation Army’s investment management partner
- Enterprise Risk Management with respect to Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) considerations
- Maintenance of key supply partnerships, including for uniforms, labour-hire, fleet, information technology, paper products, insurance
- The Salvation Army Australia’s Supplier Prequalification and Assessment tool, with consideration of ethics, labour practices, health and safety, and sustainability

Supplier Assessment and Selection

A key focus of The Salvation Army’s Strategic Sourcing and Procurement function continues to be to reduce supply risk through objective and transparent supplier selection and management.

The Salvation Army Australia’s Supplier Code of Conduct outlines the expectations of suppliers and their supply chain when providing goods and services to The Salvation Army Australia, including with respect to modern slavery.

As such, all suppliers must:

1. Meet their obligations under the Australian Modern Slavery legislation
2. Never supply goods that have been produced or are made from components that have been produced under conditions of modern slavery
3. Certify with the provision of evidence that to the best of their knowledge the products and/ or services being supplied are ethically sourced
4. Not use forced labour

Key Sourcing and Procurement Initiatives

During the reporting period, The Salvation Army Australia’s Strategic Sourcing and Procurement function introduced the following tools and initiatives to further enhance risk management capabilities:

PROCURE TO PAY SYSTEM

Coupa was introduced to provide a standardised purchase to pay process across The Salvation Army Australia which will provide improved stewardship and control of our procurement decisions and transactions, as well as greater visibility and transparency of spend profiles, which will enable improved long-term management of supplier arrangements and compliance to supply processes.

CLEANING CONTRACTOR MANAGEMENT

A review of independent contractor agreements throughout The Salvation Army, with respect to cleaning services, was conducted. As a result, a number of improvements were implemented to tighten procedures for the engagement of cleaning contractors, as well as well contingent labour, which will ultimately reduce associated risks.

FLEET

The Salvation Army Australia’s fleet services provider was reviewed and renewed, with a nationally consistent approach streamlined and strengthened for better management of risks.

CATERING AND FOOD

A multi-year project was completed to consolidate The Salvation Army’s catering and food needs to a single preferred supplier, providing more favourable contractual terms and improved compliance oversight.

SOLAR

The Salvation Army Australia has partnered with AGL for the shared installation and benefits of solar power. This work has positioned The Salvation Army Australia strategically within the solar industry to understand and address risks in energy supply chains.

Plans are also underway to work formally with The Salvation Army’s international territories to remediate detected human rights violations in supply chains.

Continuous Improvement Activities

- 1. Review and update policies and standards to more specifically delineate social responsibility requirements.
- 2. Update and action modern slavery risk information and management guidance and supplier assessment tool.
- 3. Review strategic and high-risk supply categories with a view to mapping tiers 1-2 and engaging suppliers to better understand our exposure to modern slavery risks.
- 4. Extend our supplier engagement activities through Sedex and supplier forums to improve risk mitigation.
- 5. Work with TSA internationally to remediate detected human rights violations in our supply chains.

Modern Slavery Risk Controls

As part of the development of The Salvation Army Australia’s dedicated supply chain risk register, the following controls are under consideration and will be reviewed in the next and future reporting periods:

• Suppliers agree to comply with modern slavery reporting obligations where necessary.

• Suppliers demonstrate that ethical sourcing policies and processes are in place.

• Supplier processes incorporate appropriate practices that address modern slavery.

• Supplier contracts/agreements include a statement that indicates third parties operate in accordance with applicable laws and regulations.

• Supplier contracts/agreements include a statement requiring sub-suppliers or sub-contractors to immediately report any changes in ownership or structure that would alter risk profiles.

• Supplier contracts/agreements include enforceable penalties for breach of terms by sub-suppliers or sub-contractors, including termination, as a last resort.

• Supplier contracts/agreements allow reasonably for sub-suppliers or sub-contractors to rectify issues related to modern slavery.

How we are assessing the effectiveness of our management of Modern Slavery Risks in our supply chains and operations

Achieving effectiveness in the management of Modern Slavery risks is a long-term strategy for The Salvation Army Australia. As referenced earlier in this statement, the centralised Strategic Sourcing and Procurement function has undertaken extensive work to consolidate financial data, establish national policies and processes, and on-board systems to get a better view of our supplier base and spend, streamline supplier engagement and improve data and analysis. While these do not necessarily relate directly to the management of Modern Slavery risks, we regard them as essential components of a long-term strategy to effectively assess and address a range of social risks in our supply chains.

During the reporting period:

- 100% of new or renewed centralised contracts included dedicated Modern Slavery clauses.
- We actively simplified our supply chain by reducing the number of suppliers and establishing a preferred supplier register.
- All Strategic Sourcing and Procurement personnel continue to maintain up to date Modern Slavery training completion.

Enterprise Risk and Compliance Program

The Salvation Army Australia's Enterprise Risk and Compliance function continues to actively monitor modern slavery risks, with formal mitigation, reporting and escalation protocols embedded to ensure risk concerns are appropriately escalated in a timely manner and mitigating actions are managed to completion.

The Enterprise Risk and Compliance function actively works with the Strategic Sourcing and Procurement function to identify and mitigate Modern Slavery risks.

Internal Audit

The Salvation Army Australia's Internal Audit program provides independent assurance that risk management, governance and internal control processes are operating effectively.

During the reporting period, a review of The Salvation Army Australia's efforts in combatting modern slavery and compliance with the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth) was undertaken.

The key risks addressed the review included the potential for:

- Misleading disclosures in TSA's modern slavery statement;
- Inadequate policies, procedures and systems to underpin TSA's modern slavery initiatives;
- Lack of clarity of roles, responsibility and accountability within the modern slavery compliance framework;
- Inadequate communication and training about modern slavery across employees, Officers and volunteers; and
- Inadequate documentation/record keeping to demonstrate compliance.

The review consisted of the following findings and opportunities for improvement:

- The remit of the Strategic Sourcing and Procurement function could be extended to govern localised procurement and supplier engagement, noting that these are ordinarily due to immediate need and are not accepted as standard practice
- Whistleblower Protections, Incident Reporting and Feedback/Complaints channels could be strengthened to include a clear channel for the reporting and capture of actual and suspected modern slavery concerns
- Formal reporting on modern slavery risks could be introduced as a standalone element of TSA's Enterprise Risk and Compliance function, which would enable improved visibility of modern slavery risk exposures and The Salvation Army Australia's work in addressing them
- Modern slavery training and awareness programs should be extended to be available to all personnel at The Salvation Army Australia
- Step by step procedures could be established for the monitoring of supplier compliance to TSA's Supplier Code of Conduct

During the next reporting period these recommendations will be adopted.

How we are working together to combat Modern Slavery Risks in our supply chains and operations

All of the Property Trusts share the same body of Trustees and executive management teams. All of the Property Trusts adopt the same policies, procedures and protocols, operate in the same sectors and, save for minor exceptions, share the same suppliers.

The Companies have Boards of directors appointed with the express approval of the Trustees of the Property Trusts who are the relevant parent entities of each company. Other than with respect to industry specific additional requirements, all of the Companies adopt the same policies, procedures and protocols, operate in the same sectors and, save for minor exceptions, share the same suppliers as the Property Trusts.

This Joint Modern Slavery Statement was prepared in consultation with The Salvation Army Australia's Enterprise Risk and Compliance, Strategic Sourcing and Procurement, and Policy and Advocacy Teams, together with in-house legal counsel. This Joint Modern Slavery Statement was prepared following discussions and involvement of these functions in so far as they operate and the relevant key individuals interact both with the Property Trusts and the Companies. The Salvation Army Australia's Board is committed to the modern slavery initiatives set out in this Joint Modern Slavery Statement.

Throughout the reporting period, updates on our activities of our Modern Slavery discussion group were provided to the Board Audit and Risk Committee for their awareness. This Joint Modern Slavery Statement was provided to the Board for review, prior to it being formally adopted by the Board for sign off by the Board Chair and the Chief Secretary of The Salvation Army Australia.

What else we are doing to fight Modern Slavery

The Salvation Army advocates to influence key decision makers and those who have the power to implement social policy change. This includes our advocacy with federal, state and territory members of parliament, as we know from experience that social policy can make the most difference to those experiencing hardship, injustice and marginalisation.

Situated within The Salvation Army Australia's Policy, Research and Social Justice Department, the Policy and Advocacy team is responsible for coordinating social policy development, social justice education and advocacy efforts on social policy issues, including modern slavery and human trafficking.

The Salvation Army played a key role in the passage of the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth) and has continuously advocated for improved protections for vulnerable migrant workers and restricting the importation of goods made with forced labour into Australia.

The Salvation Army Australia is also a founding member of the National Roundtable on Slavery and Trafficking and works collaboratively with government to support with the Department of Home Affairs to establish a model and a mechanism for survivor consultation.

Service, Support and Outreach

Since 2008, The Salvation Army Australia has continued to independently operated the only refuge in Australia dedicated exclusively for survivors of slavery and trafficking. The Safe House also supports men, women and children in the community who may be at risk of slavery and severe labour exploitation.

Pathways to Independence

The Salvation Army Australia also operates the Australian Freedom Fund, which provides small, individual grants to survivors and people at risk of modern slavery. The Salvation Army Australia also operates Australia's first and only Modern Slavery Transitional Housing Pilot in partnership with Salvos Housing and the Sisters of Charity Foundation, providing survivors with supported pathways to independence.

Lived Experience Engagement Program (LEEP)

The Lived Experience Engagement Program (LEEP) is funded by the Australian Government through the National Action Plan to Combat Modern Slavery 2020-25 Grant Program.

LEEP seeks to support direct contributions and advice to the Australian Government on human trafficking and modern slavery policy and programs from people with lived experience, specifically utilising their experience and knowledge of criminal labour exploitation. LEEP will pilot a Survivor Advisory Council to the government, the first of its kind in Australia and a first step in a partnership approach with modern slavery survivors to achieving change.

LEEP commenced activity in September 2021 and will complete activity by September 2023. The program design of LEEP has incorporated consultation insights from survivors in Australia and internationally, and is currently training and supporting survivors to engage in regular meetings with government officials and in civil society opportunities to engage with the government and other stakeholders.

The program has strong links with the Salvation Army Australia's Trafficking and Slavery Safe House Program, utilising staffing expertise in anti-trafficking and slavery in the management of the LEEP.

Each of the bodies / entities defined in this document as comprising The Salvation Army Australia, are all owned and controlled by the Trustees, who, by virtue of a resolution of the Trustees, consider the Board to be the relevant higher entity as per section 14(2)(d)(ii) of the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth). This Modern Slavery Statement was considered and approved by the Board of The Salvation Army Australia on 8 December 2022.
